

Long speech on Independence Day for students

Good morning everyone

Today we are all here to acknowledge our honor of being born in an independent India and to celebrate our country's 75th Independence Day.

We need to ask those born before 1947 to understand the pain of being enslaved under colonial rule. For every Indian in those days, fighting against these powerful giants, the British was a difficult task.

These difficult times and struggles must not be forgotten. Therefore, every Independence Day, we not only celebrate our independence, but we also pay tribute to those who fought for it, to those who set a vision for our country, and who sacrificed themselves for it.

The idea of being a free nation, where sovereign power is with us to determine our future, places a huge responsibility on our shoulders.

The significance of this beautiful story is that this nation has earned the respect of the world for its chosen democratic path. We can proudly say that India has never attacked any country in its 10,000-year history.

On this occasion, our thoughts first come to Mahatma Gandhi, those behind our freedom struggle, and to the martyrs who made the greatest sacrifice for the freedom of our country.

We also remember the tireless struggle of our great patriots who liberated our motherland from colonial rule.

Gandhiji wanted freedom from foreign rule and indigenous social chains that had long held our society captive. Every other Indian was guided on the path of self-confidence and hope for a better future.

Democracy gives us the right to live freely as proud citizens of a country. Today, we are fortunate to live in one because of the vision and sacrifice of our freedom fighters.

Every year there is a big celebration on Rajpath in New Delhi, where the national anthem is sung after the Prime Minister hoists the flag. In addition, the national flag is saluted with 21 guns fired along with the national anthem, and flowers are showered by helicopter.

All forces take part in the parade. After all, we can't just say August 15th is just about freedom. This day is full of emotions, it reminds us of the pain of being enslaved. I t illustrates the sacrifice of power in unity, it gives us an example that some wars can be won by non-violence and all things, it gives us the value and value of today's freedom. It is our responsibility, as proud citizens of this country, to sincerely fulfill our duty and work together for the development and progress of our country. Given the sacrifices of our forefathers, we must take an oath for a better future for our motherland.

Long live India!
